WHY SHOULD BROOKLYN GROW?

It must be a source of gratification to the owners of Brooklyn real estate to know that, notwithstanding the enormous burden of taxation saddled upon them by the reckless extravagance of some of the Albany Commissions, that property has not depreciated one iota, but, if anything, it is higher than before. The gloomy forebodings of some, who never see anything ahead but insolvency, will, no doubt, deter many from investing; and the cry of high taxes will have the effect of driving some people to Jersey, where cities are governed by the Albany Commissions, that property has not depreciated one iota, but, if anything, it is higher than before. LUMBER.—Among the retail dealers we find little or no improvement in sales, the continuance of trade remaining quite dull and few indications of a demand for the immediate necessities of buyers, or for small parcels, as wanted for small repairs and the like. A number of these instances were made of more liberal sales than for some time past, but they were in all cases acknowledged to be due to the unusual price offers during the extraordinary low period, or to the importation of duplicates from distant markets. The demand was also anticipated and caused principally by the consumption of the small dealer, who is usually disposed to buy up large lots at a time when few others are buying; and as a matter of course, such sales are subject to the fluctuations of price and demand.

The wholesale market at this season of the year amounts to very little, as there is no stock of consequence available, and many of the large dealers are engaged in making arrangements for next summer's supplies, straighten up books, or endeavoring to meet balances outstanding on last year's business. We write " endeavoring to collect" and are still a little in arrears, and are still accounting for the heavy bills sent to the market, and there appears to be nothing lacking but an ample accumulation oil hand has yet access to.
